Examination of Application #10/506,360

1. Claims 9-16 of application 10/506,360, filed on 9-February-2005, are presented for examination. Claims 1-8 were canceled via the Preliminary Amendment dated 2-September-2004.

Objections to the Drawings

2. Figures 5-7 are in the French language.

Claim Rejections under 35 U.S.C. § 112, 2nd Paragraph

3. Claims 14 and 16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. In regard to claim 14, the claim is directed to designing a nuclear fuel assembly (Preamble), but the limitations are directed to determining the maximum shearing stress of a spring. In regard to claim 16, the phrase "in the spring the article of manufacture configured to be read by a computer" is vague and indefinite.

Claim Rejections under 35 U.S.C. § 101

4. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:
Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefore, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

In re Application of: Callens et al.

4.1 Claims 9-14 and 16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter. The invention claims a method for designing a nuclear fuel assembly.

4.2 This claimed subject matter lacks a practical application of a judicial exception (law of nature, abstract idea, naturally occurring article/phenomenon) since it fails to produce a useful, concrete and tangible result.

Specifically, the claimed subject matter does not produce a tangible result because the claimed subject matter fails to produce a result that is limited to having real world value rather than a result that may be interpreted to be abstract in nature as, for example, a thought, a computation, or manipulated data. More specifically, the claimed subject matter provides for establishing a maximum shearing stress in a spring. This produced result remains in the abstract and, thus, fails to achieve the required status of having real world value, because the claims are determined to be a method for designing a nuclear fuel assembly, converting one set of numbers into another set of numbers, whereby the method does not manipulate appropriate subject matter, and thus cannot constitute a statutory process (MPEP Section 2106.02).

Claim Objections

5. Claim 15 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

In re Application of: Callens et al.

Allowed Claims

6. Claims 9-16 are deemed allowable over the prior art of record at this time, pending resolution of any rejections noted above, because the prior art does not specifically teach designing a nuclear fuel assembly by establishing a maximum shearing stress in a spring.

Response Guidelines
